Abstract

We did not set out in 1999 to create a national curricular reform project. We started by wanting to make a local impact on our campus, and the project grew slowly and steadily to the current national MAC3 project coordinated by AMATYC. Over recent years we've been asked how MAC3 evolved. In this article we hope to share our experience as leaders of the MAC and MAC3 projects with others who may want to lead a similar faculty development project.
